Appendix A: Prescription of Count Methods

Full Preferential System

This system is used for counting the votes to elect the President-Elect (three or more candidates).

1. In this system, a voter is required to indicate a preference for each candidate on the ballot paper or ballot screen by using the numbers 1, 2, 3 etc, up to the number of candidates (Full Preferential).
2. A candidate must poll an absolute majority (i.e. in excess of 50%) of all formal votes to be elected.
3. If, after all first preference votes have been counted, no candidate has obtained an absolute majority of all formal votes, then the candidate with the fewest number of first preference votes is excluded (First preference votes are the number 1s). That excluded candidate's second preference votes are then distributed to the remaining candidates.
4. If, after that exclusion, no candidate has obtained an absolute majority of formal votes, the next remaining candidate with the fewest votes is excluded and ALL of his/her/their votes (i.e. first preference votes PLUS those votes received from the first excluded candidate) are distributed to the remaining candidates.
5. The above process is continued until one candidate obtains an absolute majority of formal votes and is elected.
6. If at any exclusion, the next available preference is for a previously excluded candidate, then that preference is disregarded and the vote is distributed to the continuing candidate for whom the next available preference is shown.

Multiple Preferential System

This system is used for counting the votes to elect the Elected Directors.

1. The multiple preferential systems accomplishes with one ballot, the election of more than one candidate by a majority number of electors who cast formal votes.
2. Voters are required to mark their preference at least to the number to be elected. Preferences are to be expressed on the ballot paper or ballot screen by using the numbers 1, 2, 3 etc.
3. Votes are classified into two categories:
 - a) Preferences marked on a ballot paper or ballot screen up to the number of candidates to be elected are called primary votes. They have equal value and are credited to the candidate for whom they are cast, whether they are marked 1, 2, 3 etc. up to the number of candidates to be elected. For example, where 2 candidates are to be elected, preferences 1 & 2 are primary votes of equal value.
 - b) All preference votes beyond those primary votes are called secondary votes and rank according to their numerical number.
4. The primary votes for each candidate are counted and the candidate having the fewest number of primary votes is excluded from the count and his/her/their preferences are distributed among the continuing candidates.
5. Ballots on which an excluded candidate has obtained a primary vote are examined and distributed to continuing candidates according to the first of the available secondary votes expressed on each ballot paper. For example if there are two candidates to be elected, the votes of an excluded candidate will be distributed to the third ranked preference on their ballot. When the distribution of those secondary votes has been completed and new progressive totals obtained for each remaining candidate, the candidate then having the fewest number of votes is next excluded and his/her/their next available preferences distributed.
6. All ballots in the possession of a candidate at the time of his/her/their exclusion are transferred to continuing candidates according to the next available preference. This process of exclusions is continued until only the number to be elected remains in the count.
7. At all times care must be taken to ensure that a ballot is not transferred to any continuing candidate more than once.
